Gil Clark is an acoustic guitarist and singer/ songwriter who has been writing and performing since he was a teenager. Strongly influenced by such legends as Bob Dylan, Van Morrison, John Prine, and Jim Croce, Clark recorded his first album "Singin' Songs" in 1986, with regular releases to the masses music since.

Clark's next album "Folkster" featured Rob Tyner on harmonica, and in return, Clark sang back-up vocals on Tyner's "Blood Brothers" album. Clark's travels brought him into contact and performances with Townes Van Zandt, Country Joe McDonald, Taj Mahal, and others. Steady club work in the '90s resulted in the Live at the Rhythm Room recording. Clark played bass in The Michael Katon Band and toured Europe extensively in the mid '90s. A recording session was arranged in Nashville with Motown bassist Bob Babbitt, acting as producer that resulted in the critically acclaimed release of "Ridin' On" in 1999. In 2002, Clark formed Shining Farmer with Mike Gentry and Amy Morgan, and the self-titled album was released in 2003 .Clark's next album was entitled "Still Around," and in 2010 joined with producer Jim Roll to record the album "Thanks For The Ride."

Clark is excited about his new relationship with Tate Music Group and the quality of production and musicianship on his new release, "Love Carries ON."
