"The Divination Review" is a collective of international musicians formed around West Coast Canadian, singer-songwriter, Angelique Antal.

The current line-up hails from Austria, Wales and Slovakia, and has played in numerous bands in a variety of styles, ranging from jazz and fusion to Celtic-folk and country.

A native of Vancouver, British Columbia, Angelique's early musical influences include classic local bands The Poppy Family, Chilliwack and Prism, as well as other internationally known Canadian artists like Joni Mitchell, Neil Young, Gordon Lightfoot, and The McGarrigle Sisters.

She also acknowledges the impact of Big Bill Broonzy, Billie Holliday, Hank Williams, The Lovin' Spoonful, Abba, Bread and Blondie on her song writing, fingerpicking style and vocal harmonies. Further inspiration comes from First Nations Culture, the literary works of William Shakespeare and West Coast Canadiana.

The ten songs on this album mostly follow a traditional folk song structure, and can be best described as lyrically thoughtful and stylishly arranged. Overall, the musicianship is skilled and the vocals are clear, understated and melodic.
