Caleb Dinger began his musical career by taking piano lessons at the age of five. By the age of 10, he began to write songs on the piano. Soon after that, he learned how to play the guitar and the drums. Still taking piano lessons (and now, voice lessons) from Dr. Shawn Daly, Dinger continues to discover who he is as an artist.

Just recently, at his current age of 16, the artistic prodigy was appointed worship leader at his local church. He often performs and leads worship in areas all across Western Pennsylvania.

Dinger was recently able to pour out his heart and express himself in a recently recorded release with Tate Music Group called "Counting Stars."

"I want to share a message of the hope and satisfaction found in Christ with as many people as possible via lyric and melody," said Caleb Dinger. "With this album specifically, I just want to see how God uses it and what seeds are planted."
