Gretchen Jester has been a musical artist long before the industry ever labeled her as such. It was at 15 that the poetry she wrote began turning into music and lyrics, and the quiet time she spent in her devotions became inspiration for hundreds of songs. Her musical talents include not only playing the piano that is in all her albums, but also playing all woodwind instruments.

Gretchen has performed and lead worship in living rooms and coffeehouses, for large conferences of over 4000 and for small churches of only 50, but, she comments, "It's not the size of the audience, it's the receptiveness of the heart and whether God will use His music to be the one thing that breaks down the barriers!" It is in the sharing from her own music that she feels she is given a platform to show others who it is she loves and serves, what God has done in her life to challenge and encourage her, and how He can do the same for them. Her passion for these things is made clear through each song; every line truly speaks His name!
