Born William Burnside on April 8, 1991 in New Orleans, Will B. is a young hip-hop artist who started his career at age 11 when he learned to play the piano by ear. By age 16, he had composed his own songs and was ready to begin recording. By age 17, Will B. was on radio stations in two different states and had written the lyrics to his first album.

Growing up in Philadelphia, Mississippi, it was rather difficult for an artist to rise above the rest in such a small area. At 18, shortly after his high school graduation, Will B. and his family moved back to his birth state, Louisiana. He worked hard to get exposure for a good year and at age 19, he released his first mix tape. The mix tape received a great response from people in different states. Approximately one month later, Will B. received an e-mail from Tate Music Group saying they were impressed with his lyrical content and sound. They were interested in signing him.

Today, Will B. is signed with TMG with the possibility of being signed to a major label in the future. His album "The Beginning" is his first album released, but definitely not his last.
